A unique edited collection illustrating the relevance of Marxian methods to study contemporary capitalism and the global development process

“Application of Marxian methods to analyse concrete realities has a long and illustrious history. In this thought provoking collection of essays, edited by Alessandra Mezzadri, the subject is revisited, exploring the richness of approaches, tools, concepts, categories and the like, in their ‘field’ contexts. It is essential reading in grounded political economy, cutting across disciplinary boundaries, to celebrate the richness and complexity of Marxian methods, and thus a remarkable tribute to the genius of Marx as well.” —Praveen Jha, Professor of Economics, School of Social Sciences, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India

“If any proof were needed that Marx’s concepts and methods can push the limits of political-economy inspired fieldwork, the robust and critical engagement the reader finds in the pages of this unique compendium provides it masterfully. The relations between theory and practice are picked apart in a series of geographically and thematically diverse case studies which represent a spirited challenge to mainstream development studies.” —Deniz Kandiyoti, Emeritus Professor of Development Studies, SOAS, London, UK

Marx in the Field is a unique edited collection illustrating the relevance of Marxian methods to study contemporary capitalism and the global development process. Essays in the collection bring Marx ‘to the field’ in three ways. They illustrate how Marxian categories can be concretely deployed for field research in the global economy, they analyse how these categories may be adapted during fieldwork and they discuss data collection methods supporting Marxian analysis, including during COVID-19 times.
