This book investigates the Brazilian health cooperation in Mozambique. It attempts to understand the main motivations and outcomes of this initiative, especially considering the different power dynamics among these actors. The material counts with an interesting case study of the implementation of a pharmaceutical factory in Maputo, as a result of the cooperation activity.

This book investigates the Brazilian health cooperation in Mozambique looking at the interests of both actors and different power relations within this initiative. It counts with a case study looking at the implementation of Sociedade Mocambicana de Medicamentos – a pharmaceutical factory that was implemented in Maputo as a result of the cooperation between the countries.

Readership

This book would be interesting for academics in the field of international relations, global health governance, foreign policy, and health. It is also a good alternative for policymakers who want to understand how foreign policy formulation is translated into projects and the practical challenges that they might encounter in the field.
