Interrogation of an African development discourse in pursuit of cognitive justice

Developing Africa? New Horizons with Afrocentricity aims to contest the Eurocentric narrative of an African development discourse. This book deploys the theory of Afrocentricity as an intellectual standpoint from which African thinkers should interrogate and reconceptualize the discourse of development in Africa. Particularly, the book argues in favour of the Afrocentric re-interpretation of African history, African culture and assertion of African agency as the core building wedge in the reconceptualization of the ideal African development trajectory.

Readership

Academicians, political science and development studies students, policy-makers, politicians, in particular, those teaching/reading broadly regarding African development issues

Key selling points

- Afrocentric interrogation of African development discourse
- Afrocentric view of African history
- African culture as a resource for African development
- Assertion of African agency for African development
