Series: Strategies for Sustainable Development Series

Unfolds the relevance of non-violence that is not only limited to the peaceful co-existence of humankind but also signifies the role played by non-violence to build a fundamental interconnectedness between humans and nature

Readership

The publication will be highly useful as an academic contribution to the field of ecology, environment, anthropology, philosophy and various other multidisciplinary courses. It can serve as a very useful guide or rule book for incorporating the interconnectedness of humans and nature while designing policies for disaster resilience and environmental protection. Apart from academics and policymakers being the most relevant primary market or stakeholders, the book attempts to contribute to the environmental ethnicity of rural and non-inclusive regions that provide a remarkable learning experience in the field of aesthetics and environmental sustainability. All the investors, civil society and NGOs are the potential secondary markets.

Key selling points

Non-violence, Ecological harmony, Unity and Sustainable practices
